

Have you ever thought about printing your own T shirt design? If so, there are many places that will do tee shirt design printing or you can also do it yourself. If you are somewhat computer literate, you can buy some software that will help you do your own.

You will need to have a computer, a good quality inkjet printer, good quality transfer paper, a heat press or iron and of course, a shirt! If you are making your own design without software, it would be best to do this first and even make a few instead of just one.

You will want to load them on your computer or if drawing by hand, take a picture and then upload the pictures to your computer. You can save the design as whatever file of your choosing and could always do a couple test prints on regular paper just to make sure you get it exactly how you will want it on the tee shirt.

If you are more interested in having someone do the tee shirt design printing instead of doing it yourself, then you should check out the many companies that offer this type of service. More than likely, there are many companies in your area that specialize in tee shirt design printing. Check them all out and go with the best rates you can afford. Prices will vary with each company, which is why it is important to check around. Make sure the company has positive feedback from other customers because this will mean you will be satisfied with the final result.
